HORIZONS 1982

St. Joseph's College
Patchogue, New York

Joy at the start

We weary travellers begin to fold up our camp and damp our fire. The crackle of leaves underfoot seems to disturb the still night air as it recoils and withdraws between trees, stealing away backwards and swiftly racing into the sky through branches. In its wake, dawn reveals herself. Cold, pale and delicate, yet majestic, she rises in victory over night, and in quietude reigns. Again we can take up our journey, walking in the light, secure and cherishing hope from our inspiration of daybreak, that we too, will conquer and return.

DEDICATION

As we journeyed through the halls of a new college building, we received direction. As we journeyed through the pages of our theses, we received encouragement. As we journeyed to knowledge, we received wisdom. As we journey on into the future, we have a friend. We, the students of St. Joseph's College, thankfully dedicate this book and all that it symbolizes to our friend, Bill Bengston. We thank him for supporting us throughout our journey and inspiring us to continue successfully on our way.

Fear in the journey

Joy in the coming home

A part of the heart gets lost

in the learning

Somewhere along the road

We begin our journey in high spirits and take heart along the way from the tall waving fields of poppies and bluebells on the outside edges of the forest.

The road is well traveled and the shady walkway is bordered by friendly oaks, standing side by side, arms outstretched, fingers intertwined, a silent green vigil watching our progress. The enduring oaks are our teachers, communicating to us a sense of responsibility, and a spirit of faith.

This journey is not the first we've taken, nor will it be the last, but for many of us, it could be the most significant. As we are shaded by the leaves overhead, and as we tread on those beneath our feet, we travel a road akin to the veins in a leaf. One path leads from another and this one leads yet to the next; the strength and rightness of one influences all of the rest.

Through sunrises and sunsets and cloudy days and night, we have trod onward in the westward face of the skies. We have had each other to help us through fears and frustrations and the demons of self doubt that seemed to lurk beneath the leaves. Those taller and surer of foot have been the strength for all of us.

Our goal lies ahead of us, just out of sight. Our moccasins wear thin and our burdens grow heavy. The green palms, overhead, spread out, face up, to the sky. One billion protective hands shield us from the midday sun, and bathe us in the green light of innocence. Our foot prints in the clay dust now follow us, telling our history, and the western direction we devour portend our future.

Today, Tomorrow, Yesterday
by Marla Ogof

Yesterday is gone
Only a delicate memory
burns in our hearts.

Today life's at its fullest
We grow with each precious moment
As our learning increases to knowledge.

Tomorrow is here
as today ends
The beauty of the energetic sunlight welcomes a new beginning.

But, yesterday is gone and tomorrow is today.

"Don't you believe me, Andrea?"

At last we see the end of our forest and as dusk falls we enter the meadow. Our path is yet clear, but now much more encroached upon by vines and wild flowers. The tallest grasses wave shoulder high. We lose our sense of protection but forego it readily for the feeling of freedom the meadow lends.

D'Ecclesiastics Present

"Hi, Mom, we made it."

On February 28, in the company of family and friends, twenty-one students received their school rings. Emotions and songs of praise filled the chapel as all became one in this celebration.

Ann Powers, of the Child Study Department, stressed the ring as a symbol of unity, a reminder of academic achievements, enrichment, knowledge, and friendship.

Father Michael blesses the rings.

Ann Powers gives the keynote address.

Ring Day

right: Marge Brennan looks on as Sister Virginia presents Joyce Sessa with her ring.

Amateur Night

"Oh Danny Boy" . . . or is this Billy boy?

"Why are there so many songs about rainbows?"
questions Kathe and Kelly.

"How many chickens?"

A whirring slowly builds beneath the brush as the mosquitos and fireflies awaken to the twilight. The giant moon at our backs throws hideously long shadows of our bodies looming over the wild roses and goldenrod and the crawling strawberries. We roll out our mats in a small widened area of the path and lay down beneath the stars.

Acknowledgments

The Yearbook Staff would like to especially thank S. Pat Manning for her dedication and patience during the endless hours spent in preparation of the 1982 edition of HORIZONS.

Thanks are also due to Mr. John Hazzard for his guidance and support in planning our ad campaign and to Frank Albate for his willingness to experiment with new printing ideas for us. To Bill Welter and Charlie Caleca, of Carol Studios, we extend our gratitude for catching everyone at just the right angle, changing the hoods from B.S. to B.A. and back again, and for the many rolls of film developed.

Finally, we wish to thank all those who donated their time and talents to HORIZONS '82. We have treasured the moments we've shared together and hope to meet again somewhere along the road.

SMALL ENOUGH TO KNOW YOU LARGE ENOUGH TO SERVE YOU

We have triumphed over trials and tribulations with a growing sense of self, always drawing on our faith, but turning endless time to the stone wall borders of our path, to sit upon and reflect on our direction. They serve both as partial blinders to distraction and also as a visibly drawn line to destiny.
